How to use these materials:

1. Distribute these Bonus Activities to your students:
   - Bonus Activity 1: Assign as homework after Lesson 1
   - Bonus Activity 2: Assign as homework after Lesson 2
   - Ad Literacy Quiz: Use this closing activity with Lesson 4 to assess your students’ ad literacy

2. Send home the Family Handouts to help encourage ad literacy at home!
What’s in an Ad?

Look around your house to find an ad in a newspaper or magazine. Look at the ad, then answer the questions below. Attach your ad to this worksheet and bring it to class.

Questions
1. Where did you find the ad?

2. Who is responsible for the ad? (Hint: Look for a logo—a symbol used by companies to identify their products.)

3. What is the ad trying to get you to buy, do, or think?

4. Who is the ad meant for (the target audience)? What makes you think so?

5. What do you think about the ad? Does it make you want to buy the product? Why or why not?
What Is an Ad Saying?

Part 1: Find examples of ads for two different kinds of products. Label them Ad #1 and Ad #2. Check off the techniques used in each ad.

PART 2: Look at the techniques used in both ads. On a separate sheet of paper, write a short paragraph about each ad and its techniques. Use the following questions to help guide your essay:

- What is the ad for and what techniques does it use?
- Why does the ad use these techniques?
- Based on the techniques used, what does each ad want you to think about the product? Is the ad successful?
- If you created the ad using different techniques, which techniques would you use? Why?

When you finish, attach your essay and the two ads to this worksheet to bring into class.

Dear Family,

Every day your child is exposed to advertising—not just on TV and online, but on buses, buildings, and even inside classrooms! Many ads target kids ages 8 to 12. Given what kids see and hear around them, it's important for them to know how to decode and understand ads.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is introducing a new set of lesson plans and educational resources to raise kids’ advertising literacy. These lesson plans are based on the FTC's website Admongo.gov, which features games and activities to help kids understand advertising from the inside out.

Through Admongo.gov and these lesson plans, the FTC, the nation's consumer protection agency, will help kids answer three critical questions about advertising:

- Who's responsible for the ad?
- What is the ad actually saying?
- What does the ad want you to buy, do, or think?

By applying the information they learn in this program, kids will be able to recognize and understand ads...and make smarter decisions as consumers! We hope you find these activities fun and useful—and be sure to check out Admongo.gov!

Sincerely,

The Federal Trade Commission
Super Ad-tastic Scavenger Hunt

Ads are everywhere! Sometimes they're in surprising places—even packaging, T-shirts, and logos can be ads. Search your house to see how many different types of ads you can find. Try to find at least two ads in each room. Don’t forget to write down what the ad was for and where you found it in the house.

KITCHEN

Hint: Look on your refrigerator or inside your cabinets.

Track Your Ads

Advertisers place ads on TV shows they think their target audience is watching. Do they choose correctly? Choose a favorite family TV show to watch with your child. Write down two ads that appear during the show. After each of you has finished your part of the chart, compare notes. You might be surprised by what you see!

Promote Your School!

Advertising can be used for more than selling products. It also can be used to raise awareness and promote events. Use your new understanding of advertising to create an ad promoting an event, cause, or place at your school. Whether it’s about a bake sale or a sporting event, your school’s great playground or cafeteria, your ad can let people know about it. Use this sheet to plan your ad.
